Pier Francesco Giambullari was born in Florence in 1495, the son of Bernardo Giambullari, prominent as a writer of light poetry, who had enjoyed official favor under Lorenzo il Magnifico and would again under Pope Leo X. The son received an excellent humanistic education that included instruction in Hebrew and Greek as well as in Latin. He was a scholar rather than a poet, and like his father he benefited from the patronage of the ruling family. By 1539, despite a lack of published literary accomplishments, he was already known in the Florentine scholarly and literary world. In 1540 he became an early member of the Umedi and thus, the next year, a founding member of the Accademia Fiorentina. That body published in 1547 a volume of public lectures on... eee372629a
