Hesperocyparis guadalupensis In 2005 the goats were finally removed Hesperocyparis guadalupensis, commonly known as Guadalupe cypress, is a species of western cypress from Guadalupe Island in the Pacific Ocean off the western coast of Mexico's Baja Peninsula. It is used as an ornamental tree in Mediterranean climates, particularly in Europe, but has no other significant human uses. It became an endangered species due to feral goats living on Guadalupe Island that – for more than a century – prevented new trees from growing. In its native habitat it depends on water from the fogs that envelop high ground in the northern half of the island. Guadalupe cypress is closely related to the vulnerable Tecate cypress, which grows on the mainland in Baja California and southern California. In 2005 the goats were finally removed from the tree's island home as part of an island restoration project. It was previously known as Cupressus guadalupensis until 2009. It is a medium-sized tree with fine green to blue-green foliage. species due to feral goats living on Guadalupe Island that – for more than a century – prevented new trees from growing. New trees are growing and other plants are beginning to recover, though the future of the species is not yet assured 8931669dcc

The custom was developed in Central Europe, particularly Germany and Livonia (now Estonia and Latvia), where Protestant Christians brought decorated trees into their homes. The tree was traditionally decorated with "roses made of colored paper, tinsel, apples, wafers, and confectionery". Moravian Christians began to illuminate Christmas trees with candles, which were often replaced by Christmas lights after the advent of electrification. Today, there is a wide variety of Christmas ornaments, such as garlands, baubles, tinsel, and candy canes. An angel or star might be placed at the top of the tree to represent the angel Gabriel or the Star of Bethlehem, respectively, from the Nativity. Edible items such as gingerbread, chocolate, and other sweets are also popular and are tied to or hung from the tree's branches with ribbons. The Christmas tree originated as a custom of the Lutheran Churches and only in 1982 did the Catholic Church erect the first Vatican Christmas Tree. 8931669dcc

The tree is also called the Gubbio Christmas Tree or the biggest Christmas tree in the world 8931669dcc

This tradition started when the people of Gubbio decided to celebrate Christmas in a different way and in 1981 the first tree was illuminated.

Each year, on the eve of the feast of the Immaculate Conception (December 7), the Christmas tree is lit up. Since then the tradition is repeated annually thanks to a special committee consisting of volunteers giving up their free time for about three months every year. 8931669dcc In the 19th century, the square contained buildings of the city council and noble assembly. 8931669dcc Rainwater harvesting 8931669dcc

== Geography == 8931669dcc This system comprises square embankments with three sides featuring nine-inch walls; one side remains open to facilitate the entry of rainwater. Once a structure is filled, the overflow moves to the next Chauka, and so on. By retaining rainwater in this manner, the system helps prevent soil erosion and replenishes surface water, which in turn promotes the growth of various grasses. This process not only holds the soil together but also provides grazing areas for cattle and goats, as the Chauka system is predominantly used on common land. For optimal effectiveness, this method is combined with the planting of grass seeds and trees. 8931669dcc Pinus radiata is a versatile, fast-growing, medium-density softwood, suitable for a wide range of uses and valued for rapid growth (up to two meters (6.5 feet) in one year), as well as desirable lumber and pulp qualities. Although P. radiata is extensively cultivated as a plantation timber in many temperate parts of the world, it faces serious threats in its natural range, due to the introduction of a fungal parasite, the pine pitch canker (Fusarium circinatum). The pine shoot moth Rhyacionia buoliana is another serious problem. In cultivation in New Zealand, Pinus radiata has grown as much as 61 m (200 ft) in 41 years, an average of 1.5 m (4 ft 11 in) per year. 8931669dcc == Description == 8931669dcc The islands are an autonomous region of Portugal.
