Sociology of culture she developed a theoretical model for understanding how social structures and individual roles influence cultural beliefs and practices. French sociologist The sociology of culture, and the related cultural sociology, concerns the systematic analysis of culture, usually understood as the ensemble of symbolic codes used by a member of a society, as it is manifested in the society. For Georg Simmel, culture referred to "the cultivation of individuals through the agency of external forms which have been objectified in the course of history". Culture in the sociological field is analyzed as the ways of thinking and describing, acting, and the material objects that together shape a group of people's way of life 6ffc075e93

Race (human categorization) National Academies of Race is a categorization of humans based on shared physical or social qualities into groups generally viewed as distinct within a given society. The concept of race is foundational to racism, the belief that humans can be divided based on the superiority of one race over another. Modern science regards race as a social construct, an identity which is assigned based on rules made by society. While partly based on physical similarities within groups, race does not have an inherent physical or biological meaning. Using Population Descriptors in Genetics and Genomics Research: A New Framework for an Evolving Field (Consensus Study Report). The term came into common usage during the 16th century, when it was used to refer to groups of various kinds, including those characterized by close kinship relations. By the 17th century, the term began to refer to physical (phenotypical) traits, and then later to national affiliations 6ffc075e93
