1 yen note All three of these series came to an end due to massive inflation. Almost concurrently, the government established a series of national banks modeled after the system in the United States. These circulated with the 1 yen coin until 1914, and briefly again before the notes were suspended in 1958. Notes from the Japanese government, known as "government notes," were the first to be issued. The 1 yen note (1??) was a denomination of Japanese yen in seven different series from 1872 to 1946 for use in commerce. and briefly again before the notes were suspended in 1958. Because they were being counterfeited, they were replaced by a new series which included the first portrait on a Japanese banknote. Notes from the Japanese government, known as "government notes," were the first to be issued through a company in Germany. These national banks were private entities that also released their own notes which were later convertible into gold and silver 0b74cfe9d9
